HISTORICAL SKETCH

[This brief history of Company K. 30th Georgia is based on an historical sketch by Kelly Madaris descendant of Jackson Madaris, Pvt. Company K, "Chattahoochee Volunteers" 30th Georgia Volunteer Infantry, CSA. and excerpts from Confederate Military History Volume 6, Chapter 2]

The Georgia 30th Infantry Regiment was assembled at Milledgeville, Georgia, in the fall of 1861.

In September 1861, Georgia Congressman David J. Bailey established Camp Bailey with the permission of Governor Joseph E. Brown. Camp Bailey was located between Fairburn and Palmetto, Georgia along the railroad track. The actual location of this site is not known today, but is believed to be under the Owens Corning Plant. Bailey recruited men of Campbell and Carroll Counties along the Chattahoochee River for the Confederacy. This company became known as Company K, the "Chattahoochee Volunteers".

Company K was joined at Camp Bailey by ten other Companies that were organized from Butts, Bartow, Fayette, Clayton and Chattahoochee Counties in Georgia. On December 16, 1861, the 30th Georgia moved to Griswoldsville in Jones County, Georgia. By the 23rd it was encamped just below Savannah, Georgia.

At the organization of the Thirtieth regiment Georgia volunteers the following were the field officers: Col. David J. Bailey; Lieut.-Col. Miles M. Tidwell; Maj. Cicero A. Thorpe; Commissary A. N. McLarty; Quartermaster J. C. Hightower; Adj. J. W. McCord. The captains were John L. Barnett (A), H. Hendrick (B), J. G. Lindsey (c), Thomas C. Bartlett (D), Robert M. Hitch (E), William N. McGouirk (F), John Edmondson (G), Francis M. Harrell (H), C. A. Dollar (I), Wm. B. Richards (K).

The Thirtieth served until the spring of 1863 in the department of South Carolina, Georgia and Florida. In the spring of 1863 it had about 300 effectives. It went to Mississippi, forming the brigade of Col. C. C. Wilson which comprised the 25th, 29th, and 66th regiments, First Battalion Georgia Sharpshooters, and the Fourth Battalion Louisiana.

Company K remained on detachment until the spring of 1864 along the East Coast, therefore it was not involved in the Chickamauga or Mississippi campaigns.

The 30th traveled to North Georgia and fought in the Battle of Chickamauga in late September 1863. Colonel Thomas Woodward Mangham was wounded and permanently disabled at Chickamauga, Ga. September 19, 1863. He retired to the Invalid Corps April 23, 1864.

Soon after Chickamauga, Col. Wilson was promoted to Brigadier General.

While enroute to Dalton, in North Georgia, to rejoin the Regiment, many of the troops jumped train in Palmetto and Fairburn, Georgia to visit their homes in Campbell County.

The Thirtieth was consolidated with the 29th Regiment. After Wilson's death due to fever at Dalton in November, 1863, the 30th was assigned to the brigade of General Stevens, of Walker's division. In December, 1863, the 29th/30th totaled 341 men and 195 arms. Gen. Steven's brigade consisted of the following units during the Atlanta Campaign:

- 1st Georgia Confederate Regiment--- Colonel G. A. Smith
- 25th Georgia Infantry Regiment
- 29th Georgia Infantry Regiment
- 30th Georgia Infantry Regiment
- 66th Georgia Infantry Regiment
- 1st Battalion, Georgia Sharpshooters
- 26th Georgia Infantry Battalion--- Major J. W. Nisbet

During this time its officers succeeding those already named were Cols. Thomas W. Mangham and James S. Boynton; Maj. J. R. Boynton and Henry Hendrick; Commissary J. C. Little. Felix L. Matthal became captain of Company A, R. J. Andrews of C, Hudson Whittaker of D, John McLeod of E, and George T. Longino of K.

Company K continued north and participated in battles at Calhoun, Ga., the Battle of New Hope Church, Kennesaw, Peachtree Creek and the Battle of Jonesboro in the Atlanta Defense. Then the 30th regiment traveled north again and fought battles in Franklin and Murfreesboro, North Carolina, Decatur and Nashville, Tennessee.

Many of the men were captured in the battles in Tennessee and were taken to Camp Chase Ohio, a Union Prison Camp. They suffered conditions comparable to what the Union soldiers experienced in Andersonville, Georgia. Many starved to death and many were lost to disease and exposure in the extreme cold of the North. Those who exchanged this harsh prison life for signing allegiance to the US were placed in blue uniforms and sent west to fight Indians. They were known as "Galvanized Yankee's", a term for a Confederate Gray soldier coated in Union Blue.

The loss to this regiment by both battle and disease decimated its numbers. Few of the men surrendered under General Joseph E. Johnston on April 26, 1865.

30TH GEORGIA VOLUNTEER INFANTRY

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

30th Georgia Volunteer Infantry Regiment

Active: September 25, 1861 - April 26, 1865

Country: Confederate States of America

Allegiance: Georgia

Branch: Confederate States Army

Engagements: Jackson Expedition, Battle of Chickamauga, Battle of Adairsville, Battle of Peachtree Creek, Battle of Jonesborough, Battle of Franklin, Third Battle of Murfreesboro, Battle of Nashville

Notable commanders: Colonel David Jackson Bailey

Organization

The regiment was organized at Camp Bailey, near Fairburn, Georgia in October 1861. Ten companies of volunteers met at the request of David Jackson Bailey, who had obtained permission from Governor Joseph E. Brown to form an infantry regiment for Confederate service. Due to a confusion in numbering, the regiment was known as the 25th until it was rearranged in April 1862. After re-arrangement and throughout the war it was known as the 30th Georgia[1]

The 30th Georgia comprised ten companies. The regiment was re-arranged in April 1862 in accordance with the conscript bill passed by the Confederate Congress, as follows:

- Company A (originally Company B): Butts County - "Bailey Volunteers", Capt. Henry Hendrick
- Company B (originally Company E): Bartow County - "Bartow Invincibles", Capt. R. M. Hitch
- Company C (originally Company F): Campbell County - "Campbell Sharpshooters", Capt. W. N. Magouirk
- Company D: Bibb County - "Hugency Rifles", Capt. Hudson Whitaker
- Company E (originally Company I): Clayton County - "Clayton Invincibles", Capt. C. A. Dollar
- Company F (originally Company C): Butts County and Spalding County - "Hunter Guards", Capt. R. J. Andrews
- Company G (originally Company H): Fayette County - "Fayette Volunteers", Capt. R. M. Harrell
- Company H (originally Company G): Campbell County - "Campbell Greys", Capt. J. O. Redwine
- Company I (originally Company A): Butts County - "Butts' Invincibles", Capt. F. L. Walthall
- Company K: Campbell County - "Chattahoochee Volunteers", Capt. G. F. Longino

Early Deployment

The regiment initially stationed itself at three camps in or near Savannah, Georgia: Camp Bartow, Camp Hardee, and Camp Young.[2] In early October 1862 the 30th Regiment marched to Florida to reinforce General Finnegan, who had retreated from Jacksonville. After a few days' picket duty the troops were ordered back to Savannah. In late October deployed to Coosawatchie, South Carolina to reinforce Confederate forces defending the railroad between Savannah and Charleston. Union forces had already retreated, however, and the 30th returned to Savannah after a few days.

In December 1862 and January 1863 the regiment twice travelled to Wilmington, North Carolina to defend against an anticipated Union advance; returning to Savannah on February 9. April 9-19 the regiment deployed to Charleston, South Carolina. April 27 - March 4 they deployed to Pocotaligo, South Carolina.[3]

Jackson Expedition

The 30th Georgia Regiment reached Jackson, Mississippi on May 14 as part of General William H.T. Walker's Brigade, marching from there to Yazoo City and on to the Big Black River (Mississippi) to join the Jackson Expedition. Under the command of Colonel Thomas W. Mangham, the regiment was ordered on July 4 to march in the rear in a retreat towards Jackson, keep up stragglers, and aid the sick and disabled.[4] On July 7 the regiment halted at a position west of Jackson and stacked arms. On May 16 the 30th Georgia Regiment, together with the 24th Texas Regiment were successful in re-establishing a picket line that had been charged by Union forces the previous day.[5]

Battle of Chickamauga

On August 24, 1863 the regiment left Morton to join General Braxton Bragg's army in Chattanooga, Tennessee. They joined Bragg's retreat from Chattanooga on September 7, arriving in Lafayette, Georgia, and spent the next few days with Bragg's army maneuvering for position. On September 19, they took part in the Battle of Chickamauga. Having crossed the Chickamauga River the night before, the 30th Georgia advanced with a brigade commanded by Colonel Wilson of the 25th Georgia, as part of the left flank. Colonel Mangham was wounded during the advance; the brigade fell back to its first position, which it held until reinforcements arrived. The 30th Georgia engaged again the next day in a different part of the field.[6]

Georgia Campaign

The brigade to which the 30th Georgia belonged suffered some losses through capture during the Battle of Missionary Ridge, but took little part in the fighting. Afterwards, they retired with Bragg's army to Dalton, Georgia for winter quarters. In May 14, 1864 the regiment took some fire at the Oostanaula River, but did not take part in the Battle of Resaca. The 30th Georgia participated in fighting near Calhoun, Georgia on May 16, just prior to the Battle of Adairsville, sustaining considerable losses.

The 30th Georgia took part in the Battle of Peachtree Creek and sustained considerable loss there. They also participated in the Battle of Jonesborough, where Company E found itself fighting in its home county, with several killed or wounded.[7]

Tennessee Campaign

The 30th Georgia was involved in a skirmish in Decatur, Alabama with Hood's army on November 1864, where a lieutenant was killed and other casualties suffered. The regiment was on the extreme left flank of Jackson's Brigade during the Battle of Franklin, figuring prominently in the fighting and incurring heavy losses. The regiment participated in the Third Battle of Murfreesboro, again suffering losses. [8] During the Battle of Nashville, on the afternoon of December 16, the 30th Georgia Regiment was surrounded when the Confederate left flank was breached by heavy cannon fire. Nearly all members of the regiment were killed, captured or wounded at this battle.

About this collection

Confederate Pension Applications, 1879-1960

Applications, supporting documentation, and correspondence for indigent or maimed Confederate veterans or indigent widows of Confederate soldiers. These records are from Record Group 058-01-001, Confederate Pensions and Records, Pension Office, Pension Applications.

Historical Background

The State of Georgia first began giving pensions to Confederate soldiers who had lost a limb in 1877. The law was gradually broadened to include soldiers who were disabled due to their military service and to indigent soldiers. Indigent widows of Confederate soldiers who died in service or as a result of their service began receiving pensions in 1890. Pension funds also paid medical expenses for final illnesses and funeral expenses for indigent soldiers and widows.

What information can I find?

Pension files can include:

- Applications
- Correspondence regarding the pensioner
- Affidavits
- Receipts
- Transfer of assignments of pension funds
- Military records

Pension applications generally give:

- Length of Georgia residence
- Place of residence at time of application
- Military unit during the war
- Date of enlistment and discharge
- Any disabling wounds received
- Veteran's health at the time of application
- Value of personal property.

Widows' pension applications include:

- Name of the husband
- Name of the husband's military unit
- Date of their marriage
- The widow's means of support
- Some widows' applications include a copy of the couple's marriage certificate.

AFFIDAVIT OF PHYSICIAN

State of Georgia
Paulding County

Personally came before me W.O. Hitchcock, M.D. and S. Robertson, M. I., both known to me as reputable physicians of said County, who, being [??]rally sworn, say on oath that they have examined carefully James J. Johns, applicant for pension under Section 1254, Code, and after such personal examination say that his precise physical condition is as follows:

He has Varacostal[??] of Left Festrle[?]. Also Enlargement of Left Festrle[?]; General debility. This with his age absolutely disables him from earning any [??] a support for himself by manual labor or any other calling.

And that we have no interest in said pension be allowed.

 Four files are listed:

- Couch, Surname in Tax Digests Coweta County - not applicable surname
- 1851 Tax Digest 1st District Senoia & Haralson - searched for Surname "Moore". Found Moore, James H. Not the ancestor I am looking for.
- 1851 Tax Digest 2nd District Moreland & White Oak - searched for Surname "Moore". Found Moore, Issac. Not the ancestor I am looking for.
- 1851 Tax Digest 3rd District Bethlehem & Corinth - searched for Surname "Moore". Found Moore, John M. Not the ancestor I am looking for.

I actually suspect that my ancestor had moved from Coweta County by 1851. I'm trying to find tax records closer to 1840 in order to find George W. Moore.

Searched "historical tax records of Coweta county Georgia"

First result is the Family Search wiki page for Coweta County, Georgia

Second result is Coweta County, Georgia Public Records Directory - for more searching current county information as a resident. Did find one link for genealogy records searches which redirected to www.genealogytrails.com/geo/coweta/. Does not contain information about tax records, but had other information that may prove useful in other ways, including biographies, cemeteries, census, deaths, history, marriages, military, newspapers and obituaries.

Third result was for paying current property taxes in Coweta County

Fourth result was for the RootsWeb page for Coweta County, Georgia. The only tax reference was the 1851 Tax Digests by District that was already found through USGENWEB. There is a lot on this page about Coweta Georgia, worth exploring later, but not much about tax records.
